FIFTY YEARS OF LIFE.

Reminiscences of the Past. From the New Griesos Picayone ! As a remarkable instance of frugality and acting upon the principle that "will-ful waste makes would want," it is said that the celebrated Col. Agron Burr never was known, at any meal, to leave anything upon his plate. Howsoever much he may have been traduced and villified; no man ever felt more keenly for the misfortunes of others, and especially for the poor, than Aaron Burr. There is no question but that he pos-

Burr was treading his way homewards, of a very cold night, and in the midst of a heavy snow storm, which was almost blinding, he discovered, by the dim light in the basement sloty of a miserable tonement, a poor woman hiddling he two little children together over the dyng embers of a wood fire. Peering brough the window-pane, the scene of through the window-pane, the scene of abject poverty which presented itself was sufficient to touch his heart. He went to the nearest grocery, and had the woman sent some split wood and some bread; and the next day he left a sufficient sum with the grocer to provide for the paor woman for a week. At this very time, Aaron Burr was principally improved by the miserable with pally supported by the miscrable pit-tance of a pension allowed him by the

"How do you know this to be a fact !" asked my quiet friend.

Because, long afterward, in speaking he inadvertently mentioned the circumtance in my presence.
"You knew Asron Barr," then rewho first showed me how to fold a note, I had acted as his amanuensis on a spe cial occasion, in writing a note at his di-rection. I was but a young boy at the time, and he then showed me how to fold a note properly. I saw him for the last time the same winter I came home from Rio. He was then living in New York, in a house on the left-hand side of Broedway, fronting the battery, and near NEW GOODS! Bowling Green. It was the last hous I visited him on that occasion, and knowing that he had been fond of a good eight, I brought him a bunch of Ha-vanas. He thanked me very kindly, but declined them, saying that he had quit smoking and taken to spuffing.

The colonel immediately replied, in his peculiar emphasis of tone, "I did not ask you for your advice, sir. Never asked." I have never forgotten the The next summer, about June, 1826,

Col. Burr removed to Port Richmond, staten Island, at which place he died, on the 13th September following.

Twenty years after this event, while I was in Washington city, an Episcona ares to the young men, took occasion n illustration of the evils of ambition, enounce Aaron Burr as an atheist, wh had died cursing God. Knowing that this was not the case, and that the ven-erable liev. Dr. Van Pelt, of New York, had administered the escratnent to Col. Burr, and who died in the full faith of a christian, I wrote to the doctor and asked him to furnish me with the full articulars of Col. Burr's death. It will be regarded as a literary curiosity, and will be astmired, not only for its peculiar style of the old school, but also for its incidents of the CLOAKS, deepest interest. New Your, December in 1853. Samuel C. Reid, J

My Dear Sir: Yours, acknowledging the receipt of my statement (at your de sire) of the last sickness, with attending circumstances, of Col. A. Burr, came safe to hand. I am pleased that it gave you, as you say, great gratification... Justice to the dead is as well a Christian duty as a mark of politeness and become

You propose with my permission, to publish my letter, for the benefit of posterity, to which I say, granted. In regard to your inquiry respecting my age, I was born, as the record says, in the township of Bushwick, now incorporated in the city of Brooklyn, King's county, L. L., on the 37th May, 1778, and have therefore attained to between 27 and 78 years for which a tribute is 77 and 78 years, for which a tribute is due to Almighty God for his kind care Had the honor and pleasure to see and be in company with Gen. Washington; testify to his inauguration as our first president; [which was mentioned to Gen. Taylor,] to address the people of To Merchants we will Sell for Cash at King's county, at their request, by an oration on his death, 22d February, 1800, the anniversary of his birthday ap-pointed by congress; and subsequently, by request of Gov. Tompkins, addressed and welcomed Gen. Lafayette, as our mation's guest, when he arrived at the house of the said governor, August 24, 1824, by whom I was introduced to your brave, patriotic, honored father. With the hasty recitals of these few incidents and reminiscences, etc., I close by saying I shall be happy to see you and if you publish, as you propose, please let me have the paper, or a copy.

With assurances of regard and esteem, Wholesale Rooms Up Stairs. reciptorating best wishes, I am, fleep-cifully, yours, P. J. VAN PELT, D. D. In a speech delivered by Gen. Buck-NER at the banquet given to John FRANCES MACCIER, in New Orleans, on the 5th lustant, he said : I have long known the Irish people, Mr. Chairman. My service with them as soldiers dates back twenty years, when as a young lieutenant of infantry, can excapaigns, and first learned to bear testimony to their imperious courage on the field. And not for courage only is the Irish soldier renowned; but his inthe friend some of honor is apparent even to the midst of the dangers of the battle PEARCE, PARK & CO., field. Said an Irish soldier to me, whose iden of good faith had been shocked at the violation by the Mexicans of the terms of the armislice, "Now, leftenant," he exclaimed, as we were advancing under a terrific fire, " I'll show those fe how to brenk the armis honor himself, he ever detests its violation by others. In later years it has been my fortune to command several regiments of troops composed almost ex-clusively of Irishmen, and I take pleasclusively of Irishmen, and I take pleasure here in bearing witness to their distinguished gallantry on every occasion.

And particularly did I recall the virtues and particularly did I recall the virtues of the Irish character. Mr. chairman. of the Irish character, Mr. chairman, when, a few short months ago, I steed, in the twilight hour, over the grave of one of the noblest some of Ireland. As I looked upon the plain board inscribed with his name in pencil lines, and upon the withered flowers which the fair hands of some of our countrywomen had strewn upon his grave, I wept silent tears to the glorious memory of Gen. Fatrick Cicburne. He commanded a brigade in my division, and afterward succeeded me in the command of troops whom I cannot more highly praise than to say he was one of few who was worthy to command such men. And conspicuous amongst such gallant men, and worthy soldiers of such a glorious leader, wer. Irishmen, who illustrated their high military virtues on so many fields, and dishands of some of our countrywomen had itary virtues on so many fields, and displayed on so many occasions their fidelity to the cause they had esponsed. But not to the men only is honor due. The women, also, of Ireland are entitled to our homoge and admiration. It is in Ireland as it is in our own country, and tues of her women shine with superior uster. Their praises have been sung by many a barp, but never in strains which daughters of Ireland.

I propose, then, Mr. Chairman, as a sentiment: "The women of Ireland." "Their every lone is music's own, take those of marning birds; and something norse than melody Dwois ever in their words; The colonge of their hearis are they, and from their lips each flows. As one may see a burdened bee. Forth laste from a rose.
